II – PURPOSE OF CALL FOR PROJECTS

2.1- Subject

The call for projects focuses on:

The design, realization and installation of eight (8) artistic works elaborated by artists for an exhibition with a representation of the Caribbean within the Garden of Imaginations of the Center of Animation and Interpretation of the Amerindian Culture (CAICA) of ViVé.

Place(s) of Performance:

Center of Animation and Interpretation of the Amerindian Culture whose commercial name will be "Caribbean Park of the Amerindian life of ViVé", Lorrain, Martinique, French Caribbean Island

2.2- Context of the consultation

Presentation of the historical site of ViVé

"The prehistoric site of Vivé, in the commune of Le Lorrain, has been listed in the Supplementary Inventory of Historical Monuments since February 1, 1994, and is one of the oldest and most important Amerindian sites in Martinique and the Caribbean.

From 1930 to the present day, the archaeological research work carried out on the Vivé site has led to numerous excavations revealing a wealth of Amerindian remains in the basement. Stratigraphic studies have revealed two distinct archaeological layers separated by a level of eruptive pumice deposited by Mount Pelee. The upper layer shows an occupation on almost the entire plateau dating from 420 AD but largely disturbed by agricultural activity. The lower layer, dating from 220 AD, occupies only part of the terrace and has revealed habitat structures and five burials with numerous Amerindian artifacts."

The Communauté d'Agglomération du Pays Nord Martinique (CAP Nord), as part of its policy of promoting heritage and culture, is proposing a structuring tourist facility that aims to highlight the archaeological and historical interest of the ViVé site. It is in particular about the Amerindian culture which is still little approached and yet important within the history of Martinique but also of the Caribbean.

In Martinique, the Amerindian theme is developed in the center and the south of the island on three sites: the Museum of Archaeology and Prehistory, the Museum of Father Pinchon in Fort de France and the Ecomuseum of Martinique in Rivière Pilote.

Le site de Vivé au Lorrain

The Center of Animation and Interpretation of the Amerindian Culture (CAICA), trade name: Caribbean Park of Amerindian Life of ViVé

The CAICA of ViVé is a cultural and leisure facility, intended for both Martinicans and foreign tourists. In this sense, this equipment will be different from other cultural facilities on the island.

The park proposes a heritage offer on the Amerindian culture on the very site of the archaeological excavations.

The entire park covers 22 hectares and offers about six hours of attractions and things to see and do for different categories of public with different interests. The services offered suggest a day visit with the possibility of eating on site.

The offer is designed around:

- A permanent exhibition
- A temporary program of animations and mediation actions
- Services, a store and a restaurant

The objectives of the project

It is a question of giving meaning to this strong Amerindian culture in Martinique, for all audiences, initiated or not. It is necessary to translate the richness of the forms which are left to us today, in the grounds and the subsoils of Vivé, to make them alive and prehensile by all.

At the heart of this project is a desire to make archaeological, historical and anthropological data on this culture available to everyone and to allow the public to understand and interpret them by being immersed in the Amerindian universe.

The vocation of the ViVé park is multiple:

- To present the state of research undertaken on the site and the collections available;
- Reconstitute the pre-Columbian habitat in its natural context;
- Show the activities of the Amerindian populations: agriculture, fishing, hunting, eating habits, basketry, pottery, tools, canoe making, cave art...

To do this, the Park of Vivé is the pillar of this theme within a network of Martinique and Caribbean partners. The partnership between these islands which were populated and which for some still preserve an Amerindian community is essential to exploit the whole of the prospects which the topic of "archaeology and the Amerindian culture" offers.

The guiding principles of the project are as follows:

- To be a structuring tourist facility that can attract several types of clientele at different times of the year;
- To be AN important reference site for the theme "archaeology and Amerindian culture" on the island, in the Caribbean and in the world.
- To be a consensual tool of the West Indian and Martiniquean identity beyond the cleavages of race and culture.
- To be part of a network with other tourist and cultural sites and projects in the department of Martinique, on similar themes (Fort-de-France Museum, Rivière-Pilote Ecomuseum...) or more distant (rum factories, plantations...) but also with seaside or nautical products;
- To be part of a sustainable development approach that reconciles environmental, socio-cultural and economic constraints;
- To be an economically viable facility, which can energize the territory and be a locomotive and an element of strong image at the level of the North of Martinique, even of the department, which wishes more and more, to develop its cultural heritage;
- To obtain the support of the greatest number of people, including elected officials, tourism professionals and other sectors linked to tourism, the local population, but also archaeologists, historians, researchers, etc., the objective being to find the right balance between the enhancement of an archaeological site, the preservation of nature and the environment, and the reception of tourist clients;

- Establish a partnership with the various actors of the North of Martinique, the department of Guadeloupe and other islands of the Caribbean which shelter archaeological vestiges... ;

The targeted public

The target audience is composed of :

- 75% uninformed public,
- 20% of "intensive" consumers,
- 5% of specialists

Customer motivations and expectations are:

- the requirement of a real animation and staging of the objects
- the need to mix the playful with the educational
- the search for multiple emotions and sensations
- a participative animation

The site has an estimated 60,000 paying visitors and 30,000 non-paying visitors per year.

General layout:

The concept

The Caribbean Park of American Indian Life in ViVé is composed of three diverse spaces:

- A free space with controlled access
- An open space
- A paying space

The free open spaces are located along the Red River and the Ocean to allow for circulation to the beach. This relaxing route offers different sequences of visits:

- North and South Bridge Crossing
- Walk of the Petroglyphs along the river. The petroglyphs are concrete facsimiles. This walk will allow you to observe the pirogues on the river.

- Children's games and picnics with a mobile refreshment stand. The games will be themed and interpreted from what we know about Native American games.
- Canoeing from the (floating) pirogue pier (paying) under the vegetal tunnel, an exit downstream to the "beach basin" and/or an ascent upstream to the river bridge with a towpath to eventually pull the boat.
- Walk of the Crabière Path to or from the town of Le Lorrain. It is also one of the sections of the Coastal Trail (Grand Rivière-Robert).
- Access to the Crabière food court

The paid area that occupies most of the site includes:

- Reception and meeting services. This space is both general public and professional with exhibitions, documentation equipped with multimedia, and space for seminars and conferences.
- A field of real excavations
- The archaeology space of the researchers' camp
- The space of Amerindian life: village, gardens and forest with the Amerindian villages, their pavilions/interpretive shelters, and the paths/walks in the gardens and the reconstructed pre-Columbian forest. The concentric model of the Amerindian village unit will be reconstituted in its entirety by its signs, traces and fragments in the open air, in the form of a facsimile of excavations with some carbets restored with the authenticity that contemporary scientific knowledge can offer
- The garden of the imaginary
- The workshops of craftsmen potters and basket makers
- The restaurant bar, its terraces and the store

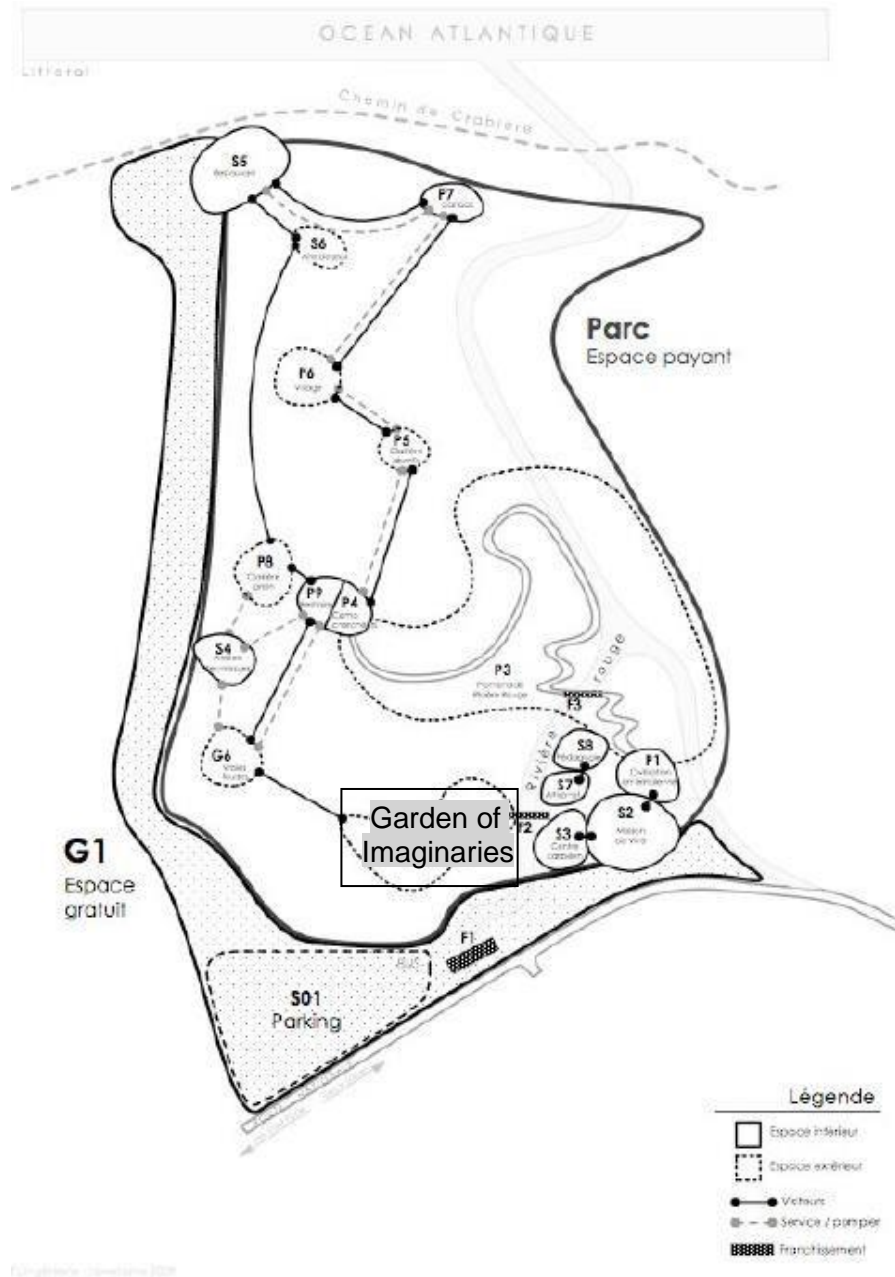

The opening of the ViVé Caribbean American Indian Life Park is planned in two stages:

- Partial opening of the site in 2024, including the exterior spaces
- The total opening of the site in 2027 with the main building

“Le Jardin des Imaginaires” (The Garden of Imaginaries)

The Garden of Imaginaries is located at the end of the visit within the paying area. It is a walk through several representations of the Amerindian civilization and its customs or beliefs. The visitor will be confronted with a clearly contemporary interpretation which is a way to push the reflection towards other horizons by having an open mind on the various themes approached.

Location of the Garden of Imaginaries

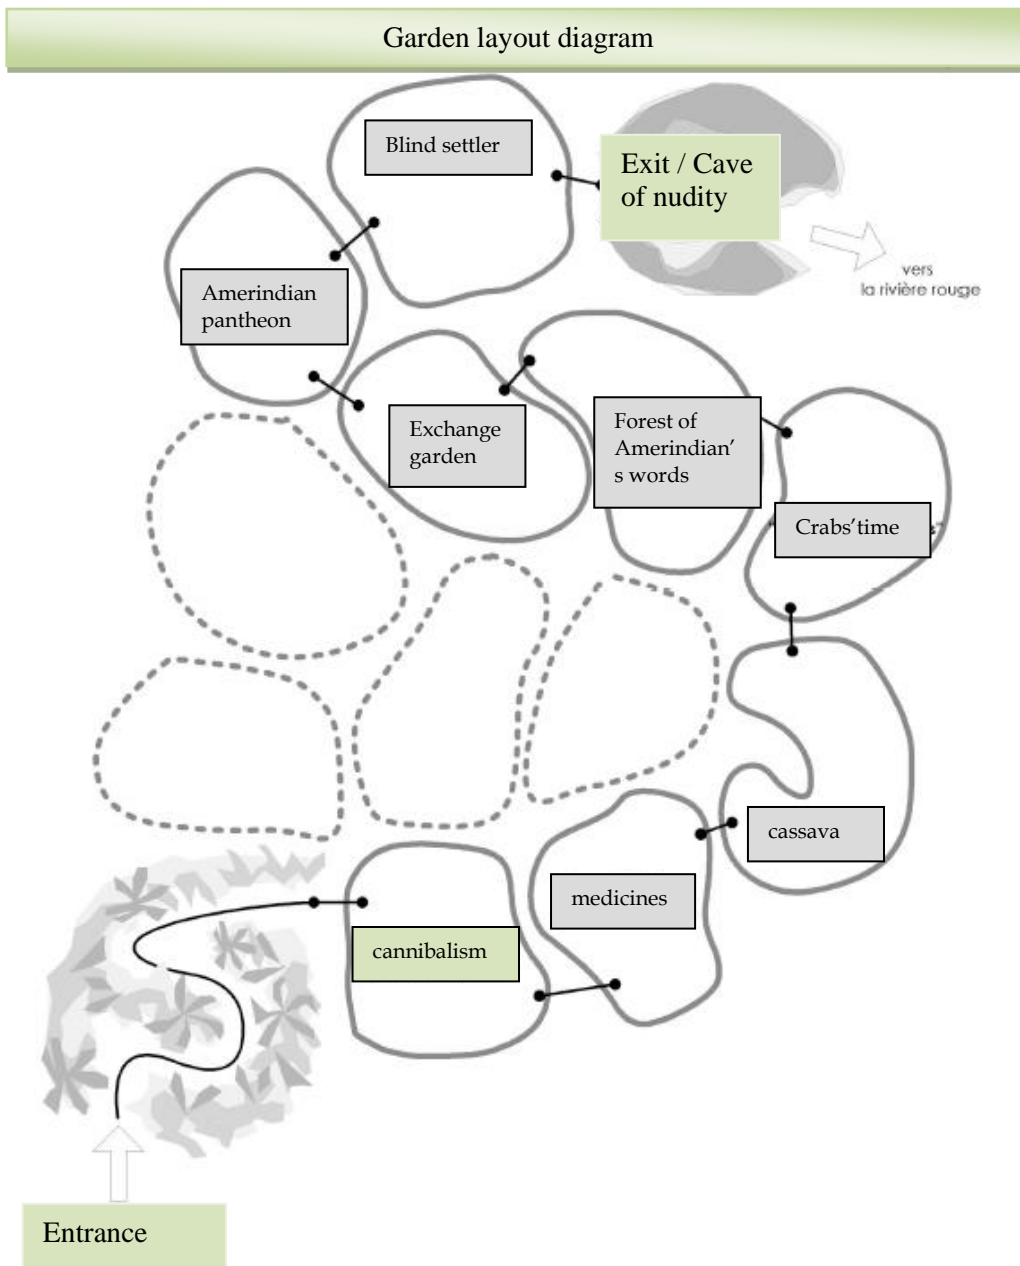

The entrance is a landscaped door in the form of a plant chicane. A clearing allows you to sit down for a moment and to identify this scenographic device from the rest of the route.

The visitor walks through a themed garden, following a path leading from one installation to the next. The themes proposed in a first time are :

- cannibalism
- The medicine garden: chilli is elevating
- The Cassava Monument
- The time of the crabs

- The forest of Amerindian words". "The garden of exchanges
- The hallucinogenic garden" or the universe of the spirits or "the Amerindian pantheon" "the cemís
- The blind colon
- Amerindian nudity

The exit is through the cave of nudity. In addition to the functions of door, it has for object to create a transition which makes escape the visitor to the sight of the surrounding building. It is a labyrinthine path formed by artificial and natural riprap.

It is to consider the works in the garden:

- Received ideas: nudity, the "good savage", the anthropophagous, the lack of material culture, the hierarchy of civilizations, the notion of progress.

- The permanence of the Amerindian civilization in Martinique and the Antilles today.
- The great founding elements of the Amerindian civilization, whose relationship to nature is probably the most difficult concept to make sensitive, if not to make the visitor of today understand.
- Doubt: it is a question of a glance of today whether it is scientific or neophyte: if the veil is raised, the mystery remains whole on our Amerindian brothers of the time of Vivé.
- How does Amerindian culture question our own culture today?

The Garden of Imaginaries brings to light a series of problems that will each be entrusted to interpreters of form - artist, architect, gardener, designer, installationist - who will be able to form "couples" with a philosopher, an anthropologist, a sociologist, a writer, under the control of the scientific leaders of the project.

It is therefore only a question here of developing these themes with another view, from a different angle that leaves room for interpretation, fascination and imagination:

- cannibalism: a simple caricature of the cauldron where one boils the man to eat as one eats a banana? Or the metaphorical reality of eating the enemy or a part of a loved one: to make him disappear, to recover what the enemy has taken from oneself, like "eating" one's own values. Starting from the "Manifesto of the Anthropophagi" / Brazilian artistic movement of 1928, still alive, to make the concept of anthropophagy clear. This interpretation is there to cast doubt on the intangibility of the notion of good and evil.

- The medicine garden: chili is uplifting: cleanses, purifies, clears evil spirits, purifies, participates in scarification, chili shamans, As with cassava, this garden shows that this small plant has value on several levels and is not just a simple condiment. This garden integrates the medical issue: the medicine garden. Phytotherapy.

- The Cassava Monument: all the positive and negative values of cassava. The cassava that shows the mastery that the Amerindians could have on nature, because the cassava to be no longer a poison must be prepared and become an edible vegetable.

- The time of the crabs". This theme is there to evoke the Amerindian calendar and its permanence in the West Indian calendar: the Amerindian New Year is at the end of April (around Whit Monday). The crabs come out of the mountain in millions and go to lay their eggs in the sea. The year is called sirik (crab) and there is the constellation of sirik.

Today, Pentecost Monday is "sacred" for this crab festival. Many people in Martinique go to the sea on this day: the real family and festive outing.

- "The forest of Amerindian words". Origin Tupi Guarani, Arawak. It is a continuity on French, Creole, even Spanish and English: tomato, yam, tapioca, caiman, jaguar, kid, canoe, ...

Objects associated with sound boxes: a "word sound garden".

- The garden of exchanges: what the Amerindian culture and nature bring to the world. Conversely, the plant species imported into the Caribbean, including the species present on a part of the site. Each species imported and exported with its name and date of introduction.

- The hallucinogenic garden" or the universe of spirits or "the Amerindian pantheon" "the cemís": smoked tobacco, liquid tobacco infiltrated through the nostrils (cf juice inhalers), mixture with alkaloids. Tobacco can also be drunk. Cassava wine. Drugs to converse with the Gods, to be God. Without talking about Castaneda, the Amerindian society reverses the moral relationship to drugs, but in a mastery of them to approach spirituality. Words, songs and dances are associated with drugs.

- The blind settler: how the European settler can see in the Amerindians only savages without civilization, a sub race. The notion of the other in the 15th century. The metaphor of not understanding or respecting the other is to kill him (which is no better than eating the dead). Images, stories in an installation or an outdoor work.

- the nudity of the Amerindians: another way of dressing: To dress is not to hide the body, "to hide the deformity of the body" as the Amerindians believe it but on the contrary to adorn it, to magnify it. The only theme whose form is today defined in its broad outlines. This will be the final point of the Garden of the Imaginary and the exit towards the luxuriant nature of the banks of the Red River and its promenade. The visitor will pass through a cave inhabited by large photographs (1 m x 2 m high) of adornment, painted bodies, details of painted bodies, details of adornment that will blend into the dark passage. The cave is chosen because it is as much a Native American metaphor as a Western one (in the art of gardens), of the passage from one world to another, of the rupture, of the initiation. The cave to evoke the Amerindian man, magnificent and mysterious in his costume of colors, seems right.

2.3 Definition of the needs of CAP NORD Martinique

CAP Nord Martinique wishes to call upon artists to conceive, realize and install new works within the Garden of Imaginations. The works are intended to integrate the landscape of the garden and address the Amerindian themes previously mentioned. It is a question of creating a space where the public can leave room for its interrogations, its imagination and its senses.

The artworks will be exhibited outdoors, in a vegetal environment, which provides approximately 80m² per work. It is imperative that the works be imposing, robust and able to withstand tropical climatic conditions (sea wind, forest and humid area, exposure to the sun, heavy rains). It will be possible to propose an evolving work which integrates nature and whose objective is a natural degradation. It will be necessary to specify in the note of intention this will and the estimated life span of the work (only one to two works maximum can be ephemeral).

In order to remain consistent with the project's guidelines, artists will be chosen who are able to create original works that offer a perspective on the Amerindian imprint on Caribbean identity.

The objective is to elaborate an itinerary during which the public would discover eight different works, perennial or ephemeral. These works must offer a sensitive, relative, symbolic and artistic look at the Amerindian civilization in nature, at Man in nature.

The CAICA of ViVé is a space of exchange around the Amerindian and thus Caribbean culture. The history of this civilization unites the islands. It is through the works to represent this link, this common past and its heritage that manifests itself in different ways.

In this context, CAP Nord Martinique has set up an exhibition curator for the programming of the Jardin des Imaginaires (garden of imaginaries). The curator will be in charge of the relationship with the artists for the conception of the Garden.

CAP Nord Martinique is looking for eight artists or artists' collective to conceive, realize and install eight monumental works in the Jardin des Imaginaires of the Parc de ViVé in Le Lorrain. The exhibition of the works is open-ended. However, CAP Nord Martinique guarantees an exhibition of the works for a minimum of six years.

2.4 Location per work

The artistic fields considered are the plastic arts (sculpture, installation, graphics, painting ...) as well as creations associating landscape creation and design.

The perimeter of the artwork is set at 80m², however, a maximum of 100m² can be allocated depending on the work.

The constraints

The work will be positioned outside, in the heart of the Park of ViVé, surrounded by lush vegetation near the sea.

The monumental work must be resistant, durable and adapted to the natural environment.

Ephemeral work is accepted, the choice of a non lasting work must be in cohesion with the park and justified.

It is essential that the artistic project respects the Amerindian theme.

2.5 Maximum budget per work

The maximum budget for each work is 40 000€ (euros). It includes the costs of conception, realization and installation of the work as well as the artist's travel expenses and remuneration of the sketch. The budget also includes the transfer of rights.
